"Next Thing You Know"

You swear that you're stayin' single, next thing you know

You meet a girl at a bar and next thing you know

You get her laughin', it's 2 AM

You're tellin' your buddies three months in

That she ain't movin' in, the next thing you know

There's a U-Haul trailer, next thing you know

Your old apartment is y'all's new place

There goes the carpet but the deer head stays

Next thing you know

You're savin' money like never before

Just to spend it all at a jewelry store

Gettin' down on one knee on her mama's porch

Just prayin' she don't say, "No"

Next thing you know

Your best man gives a half-drunk speech

And you're sunburned on a honeymoon beach

And your left hand's gettin' used to that ring

And there the next two or three years go

Next thing you know

You weren't really tryin', next thing you know

There's a test on the counter, next thing you know

She's standin' there cryin', noddin' her head, "Yes"

You're half excited, half scared to death

'Cause next thing you know

You're wearin' scrubs and a funny white hat

And the doctor's sayin', "How you doin' there, dad?"

And nobody's ever called you that

And you take the drive home slow

Next thing you know

It's first steps, first dates, first car

It's 11:01 wonderin' where they are

You're sayin' that USC's too far

It's amazing how fast seventeen years go

Next thing you know

Next thing you know

Next thing you know

You get to know your wife again

And you're more in love than you've ever been

With a lot of years of remember whens
And still some down the road
'Cause next thing you know
You got a yard full of your kid's kids
And you take 'em to church, teach 'em to fish
And you tell 'em stories every chance you get
About how fast this life down here can go
Next thing you know
(Next thing you know)
Next thing you know
(Next thing you know)
